EBITDA, a non-GAAP financial measure, is defined as earnings before interest, income taxes, depreciation and amortization, including amortization of stock-based compensation. EBITDA should not be considered a measure of financial performance under generally accepted accounting principles. Items excluded from EBITDA are significant components in understanding and assessing financial performance.

"Net Income before Equity-Based Compensation Expense", a non-GAAP financial measure, is defined as net income before compensation expense incurred in conjunction with awards accounted for under Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 123R "Share-Based Payment" ("SFAS 123R"). SFAS 123R requires Kforce to measure the cost of employee services received in exchange for an equity based award based on the grant-date fair value of the award (with limited exceptions). That cost is recognized over the period in which the employee is required to provide service in exchange for the award, which is usually the vesting period.

EBITDA and Net Income before Equity-Based Compensation Expense are key measures used by management to evaluate its operations and to provide useful information to investors. These measures should not be considered in isolation or as an alternative to net income, cash flows data or other financial statement information presented in the consolidated financial statements as indicators of financial performance or liquidity. These measurements are not determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and are thus susceptible to varying calculations. The measures as presented may not be comparable to similarly titled measures of other companies.
